

HENRY FORD, HIS COMPANY, AND A CENTURY OF PROGRESS

A New York Times Notable Book

Property of
S.C.V.C.

#59

WHEELS for the WORLD

DOUGLAS BRINKLEY

"History on a grand scale... Sweeping, absorbing" —Roberto Caro

A BusinessWeek Top 10 Business Book of the Year

In this monumental work, Douglas Brinkley, one of our finest and most engaging historians, narrates the riveting details of Ford Motor Company's epic achievements, from the outlandish success of the beloved Model A and V-8 to the glory days of the Thunderbird, Mustang, and Taurus. Brilliant innovators, colorful businessmen, and clever eccentrics, as well as three factories where B-24 airplanes were mass-produced during World War II, all become characters in this gripping drama. In his many previous books, Brinkley proved himself a master at crafting engrossing, accessible, historical narratives, and this exemplary history of one of the preeminent American corporations is his finest achievement yet.

"A groundbreaking epic that separates fact from myth . . . This is business and social history at its finest."—Lee Iacocca

"Accessible and entertaining, yet thoughtful and analytic . . . A masterful account of the company's history."—The Washington Post

"Comprehensive and highly readable . . . first-rate corporate history."
—The New York Times Book Review

"[A] briskly paced account of the man, the machines, and the company that dramatically influenced the course of twentieth-century America . . . A meticulously annotated, highly readable, and engrossing work."
—BusinessWeek

Cover design by Helen Yentus

AMZN BB

B000BZ99PQ

Wheels for the World : Henry Ford, His Company, and a Century of Progress

